*Costs incurred by the applicant relating to the project must be “direct costs” not “facilities and administrative costs.” “Direct costs” are those costs that can be linked with a high degree of accuracy directly to a particular sponsored project. Direct costs must be reasonable in the context of the sponsored project and clearly allocable to that project.

“Facilities and Administrative” (F&A) or “Indirect Cost Recovery” (ICR) costs that are ineligible are costs incurred by the applicant for common or joint projects and cannot be specifically attributed to an individual project. Some examples of facilities and administrative costs include accounting staff, the maintenance of physical facilities, building depreciation, libraries, operations, affirmative action monitoring, animal and subject protection, computer infrastructure, custodial services, environmental health and safety, employee benefits, purchasing services, and security services.

RMGA granting does not typically pay for facilities and administrative costs, but in special circumstances will consider funding a maximum of 13% of these costs.
